

Your car normally takes 14” tires (that’s actually the diameter of the wheel), but you have replaced them with 15” tires. You are driving along a Michigan freeway and your speedometer reads exactly 65 MPH, which is the posted speed limit. You see a cop up ahead. Should you worry?

1. No, you are actually doing less than 65 MPH.
2. No, you are still going exactly 65 MPH.
3. Yes, you are actually doing more than 65 MPH.
4. Yes, you are probably going to hit a pothole soon.
